

Board Studies Concrete Dam

By a motion last Saturday morning, the Road and Bridges Committee of the Crawford County Board of Supervisors were authorized to investigate the cost and other factors surrounding the establishment of a permanent concrete dam complete with a fish ladder at the outlet of Lake Margrethe.

The Board called into special session concerning the lake level of Crawford County's largest body of water, thought that the answer to the problem of maintaining the legal level of the lake set by Circuit Court order in 1937, was to establish a dam which could not be trifled with. Citizens attending the session told over and over, how boards used in the dam now established across Portage Creek were taken from the dam and destroyed. Prosecutor Charles E. Moore pointed out that for an unauthorized person to touch the dam was a felony.

The Board by their motion, which passed unanimously, will attempt to get the cooperation of the Michigan Conservation Department in engineering the dam, spillway and fish ladder and possibly some financial assistance through Pittman-Robertson funds which are used for stream and lake improvement.

The Board's Roads and Bridges Committee is composed of Frederick township Supervisor Ray Murphy, City of Grayling Mayor and Supervisor Albert Roberts and Grayling Township Supervisor John McMillan.

The committee is to report back to the Board during their October session with the results of their survey. Until that time, the committee is to take what steps it can to maintain the lake at its legal level.

The fluctuation of the water level of the lake this summer has caused some fish not to spawn, it was said. Also, it was pointed out that in the spring, pike go over the dam to spawn in the Creek but they or their offsprings can not get back over the dam into the lake again. The addition of a fish ladder to the dam would eliminate this part of the problem.

Hoosier Guardsmen Near Close Of Training Period Here

Complete Army Field Tests Today

Camp Grayling, Mich., Aug. 7.—Troops of the 38th Infantry Division, Indiana National Guard, today neared the close of their fifth annual post-war training period at this northern Michigan camp.

Rigid Army Field Forces tests were completed today and units will complete their final day of training Friday before leaving for their home stations throughout Indiana Saturday. All troops are scheduled to arrive in home stations Sunday.

All tactical units of the division participated in an overnight bivouac problem, while the Army Field Forces tests were performed by various infantry, tank, engineer, anti-aircraft and artillery units. Troops were on firing ranges during the first week of training firing small arms and other weapons up to and including 155 mm. howitzers.

Training for supporting units of the division, such as ordnance, signal, quartermaster, military police and medical units, has included technical training and operations.

Last Saturday, all troops of the 38th Division participated in the annual review, with Governor Henry F. Schriener and other state officials looking on.

Regular Army instructors have supervised training, but the program has been under the direction of the division's men and officers, many of them combat veterans of World War I. Approximately 8,000 men and officers are attending the two weeks summer training camp.

Major Gen. Jesse E. McIntosh, of Tipton, Ind., commanding general of the Hoosier division, said today summer field training this year has been with "a maximum of realism" with heavy emphasis placed on tactics for the individual soldier, skill in the use of small unit teamwork in battle, and development of increased efficiency in administrative and supply units.

This has been the second consecutive two-week summer encampment of the 38th Infantry Division at Camp Grayling with the previous three being at Camp Atterbury, located in southern Indiana.

Minor Fined For Falsifying Affidavits

Kent Ward, 19, of Mt. Pleasant, was fined $50 and court costs, placed in two years probation and given a 60 day jail sentence, which was suspended for falsifying affidavits of his age in order to purchase alcoholic beverages.

The fine, costs, jail sentence and probation were the verdict of Justice Larry Galehouse before whom the youth had a hearing Tuesday morning. He was arrested early Tuesday morning in a local tavern by Sheriff William Golnick and Liquor Control Investigator Lewis Stillwagon.

A plea of guilty was entered for the youth by his attorney.

Sheriff Golnick said that the falsifying of age affidavits and obtaining liquor for minors would be vigorously policed and prosecuted. The violations have appeared to increase lately the Sheriff said, and consequently a vigorous campaign for enforcement on this type of law violations would be embarked on.

Although no injuries were reported in the collisions with the deer, high property loss was the result. Several of the crashes resulted in damage of $300 upwards. MARRIAGE MAP OF THE USA

Statistician Dr. Louis Y. Dublin shows women the best husband-hunting grounds in the United States, in this Sunday's (Aug. 10) issue of The American Weekly. See the story and illustrated cartoon map showing the proportion of potential brides in every state, in The American Weekly, exclusively with The Detroit Sunday Times.

Thirty years ago, in Maple Forest Township there were just two automobiles owned by farmers.

Five years later, every farmer had one. At that time, there was not a single tractor. Farm power was horses, slow as it was. Few acres were cultivated and Grayling was our only market from the few cows that were milked. The cream was separated on the farm and shipped by rail to distant cities.

Quack grass was too much for the horsepower and nearly every farm was overrun with it. But the tractor made short work of this pest. Now you will find farm machinery of every kind and one man does more and better work in one day than he did then in a week. Commercial fertilizer was only a dream and farmers buy it by the truck load now.

Today our farmers are businessmen, second to none. Good cows, milking machines and electric milk coolers all play a part in bringing you that good milk that Hunter's AuSable Dairy sells.

Big Business and Big Government

Many people believe that this is a wonderful period for business and especially big business. The dollars are rolling in in an endless golden stream; they reason, and about the only worry is how to dispose of them.

If you hold this belief, the following paragraph from a factual article in a publication of the National City Bank of New York should be of interest: "Big business" now devotes a major portion of its income to the support of "big government." The modern corporation has become an agency to marshal men and money not only for the mass production of goods, but also for the mass collection of taxes. Last year the 100 biggest industrial organizations each paid an average of $67,000,000 in Federal income and excess profits taxes, and $42,000,000 in other Federal, state, local and foreign government taxes. Their total direct tax bill of $109,000,000 took 67 per cent of the balance before taxes. Such taxes were at the rate of about 14 cents for every dollar of sales. They amounted to nearly two-thirds of total payrolls, and to nearly four times the dividends paid to shareholders."

The individual income tax payer is in a similar position. More and more of his income goes to government—less and less of it is his to spend and save and invest. Economists have long believed that if a nation's economy is to be kept dynamic and progressive, not more than 25 per cent of the national income must be absorbed by taxes. Today about a third of the national incomes goes to government.

Can anyone doubt that government spending, the public debt, and taxation together constitute one of the most vital problems we have ever faced as a people?

From where I sit... by Joe Marsh

Well, What Do You Know?

Do you believe in a bunch of old tales about lightning—about how it's attracted by cats or the warmth of cattle... how it never strikes in the same place twice... or how it's liable to turn milk sour? Lots of people often do—but they're wrong.

Dad Hawkins inspired this column today. He's really studied up on lightning since his own cow barn was struck that time.

"Trouble is, most of us don't know half enough about the subject," Dad says. "And about half of what we do know is false!"

From where I sit, Dad's statement applies to a lot of things besides lightning. Too many people think they know their neighbor's wrong when he votes for his candidate instead of theirs. Some people even resent our right to enjoy a friendly glass of beer if and when we choose. Opinions based on misinformation and prejudice, instead of being "grounded" on true facts can cause more damage than lightning ever did.

Michigan voters who practiced at the polls Tuesday will have an even bigger job in November.

For Michigan is a key state in the strategy of both the Republican and Democratic camps.

The Eisenhower forces plan to win the Presidential election by carrying the states that went for Dewey in 1948 and the extra ones that now have Republican governors.

Michigan lined up in the 16 Dewey states to give the Michigan born governor 186 electoral votes. The states that did go for Dewey but did elect GOP governors in the last state elections have 102 electoral votes.

Add those two groups together and you get 288 electoral votes. Two hundred sixty-six mean election.

Michigan figures in the Democratic strategy as one of the eight states where big-city labor strength is dominant. Those states, they figure, will give Stevenson 199 electoral votes.

The rock-ribbed South—which the Dixiecrat revolt failed to crack—and the border states should yield 86 electoral votes for a total of 279, 13 more than are needed. So they figure.

That Michigan has a Democratic governor is heralded as a good omen by Adlai's advisors, too.

Obviously there's some overlapping there.

Both parties need Michigan. California, Wisconsin, New York and Maryland to carry out their master plan.

For insurance, Ike-men will try to crack the South and aim for shaky Democratic states. The Democrats will try to woo back states rights areas. Truman lost and to retain eight Western states they've won five consecutive times but whose electoral votes aren't plentiful enough to give them key positions.

Michigan personalities are sure to figure prominently in the campaign, too.

Flint's Arthur E. Summerfield, as chairman of the Republican National Committee, will direct General Ike's overall campaign. Arthur H. Vandenberg Jr., taught the lore of the political arena by his late father, the illustrious Senator, is Eisenhower's executive assistant.

Both were pre-bandwagon Ike supporters, a status that adds to their influence.

Two Michigan men were often in the spotlight at the Democratic convention. They were Governor Williams and Senator Blair Moody.

Williams' polka-dot bow tie was familiar long before the demonstration that greeted his favorite son nomination. Moody practically took over the temporary chairman's job during the opening debate on the "loyalty pledge" rule. In fact it became known as the Moody amendment.

That pledge was in part nullified when the convention allowed Virginia, South Carolina and Louisiana delegates to participate despite their firm refusal to sign on the dotted line.

Whether Michigan jumped from Kefauver to Stevenson early enough is something for which no stop-watch has ever been invented. Whether the ire Moody aroused among several of his Southern Senatorial colleagues will continue to smolder is not apparent now. Whether the Stevenson-Sparkman combination represents, as many observers believe, a victory of "conservative" Democrats over the "liberals" head by Williams, Moody and Senator Humphrey of Minnesota, is a matter of personal opinion.

Answers to those questions may determine the influence the Michigan duo will have in and after the campaign.

But there's no question that their names are familiar in and out of Democratic circles.

And there's no question about the importance of the decision Michigan voters must make in November.

Michigan business is contributing to a campaign which will be launched this fall to bring new industry into the state. The Survey Research Center at the University of Michigan spent a year in analyzing opinions of Michigan manufacturers on the assets and liabilities of the state as a location for industry as a basis for the drive.

Dixie is drawing industry from Northern states. But there's going to be another war between Blue and the Grey; this one fought out on sales talks to affected industry. The Nothiners will use three big weapons: Private-financed development corporations to augment work done by state agencies such as the Michigan Department of Economic Development; More intensive promotion, including greater efforts to develop industry from within; A new atmosphere of cooperation with industry in many Northern industrial centers.

Defeat of the proposed 2% industrial processing tax in the closing days of the Legislature in June removed a threat that might have kept many an industry from coming into Michigan or expanding facilities already here.

Over 10,000 Michigan residents are scanning the skies for alien aircraft but a minimum of 25,000 in needed to keep up an efficient 24-hour watch. Less than 200 observations posts are manned around the clock.

Summer gives Russia many advantages for launching long-range bomber attacks.

Michigan Civil Defense leaders aren't hollering "Wolf!" But neither are they overlooking obvious strategic advantages that the men of the Kremlin know as well as we do.

Probably the most active parade participant in Michigan this summer is the colorful float used by all branches of the state's dairy industry. It shows a golden cow on a mound of brilliant green grass and there is an ornate throne on which the community's fairest lass sits.

It was built by the June Dairy Month committee of the American Dairy Association of Michigan and has already been seen by scores of thousands.

SHORT STORYCase Of Forgery

By Richard Hill Wilkinson

"THERE'S A CURIOUS TWIST to this case, Inspector," George Jackson, president of the Medville National Bank was saying. "Anthony Page, who deposited $25,000 with us on Monday, decided to use his right name at the last moment."

"His right name? What do you mean?"

"Anthony Page is a fiction writer. His real name is Edward Thurston. Recently a distant uncle died and left him a small fortune — $25,000 to be exact. Page consulted me about investments. I advised him not to invest in anything while the market was in its present unstable condition. He agreed, and decided to deposit the money in our bank until things looked better."

"He came in early Monday morning and made the deposit, decided to use his real name of Edward Thurston at the last moment. On Wednesday, a check for $5,000, signed by Edward Thurston, was presented and cashed by one of our tellers."

"I have questioned Thurston. He says he left for Chicago directly after depositing the money, and swears he told no one about his decision to use his real name. He had signed no checks against his account!"

Inspector Kent Clifford reflectively lighted a cigar.

"You say that Thurston made his deposit early on Monday morning?"

"As far as I can find out," the president offered, "there were only two men in the bank while Thurston was here." He handed the officer a slip of paper. "Here are their names and addresses. Both are well known to all of us, men of high repute."

Inspector Clifford studied the names. "Now tell me what your clerk was up to."

"Nothing unusual. Getting things ready to start the day. Making sure deposit blanks, pens, blotters, ink, etc. were on the lobby counters. Arranging their cash."

Inspector Clifford snapped his fingers. "That's it. Come on, we're going to call on these two men."

THE FIRST CALL was on a man named Simons in the suburban town of Sharonfield. Mrs. Simons answered their knock.

"Harry is away. Is there anything I can do?"

Following previous instructions from Clifford, Jackson said: "We made a mistake in his monthly statement last week. Do you happen to know whether he has it handy?"

"It may be on his desk. Will you come inside?"

They followed her into the house. There was a small den off the living room containing a desk. Mrs. Simons began opening drawers and peering into them. For a moment Inspector Clifford stood idly by. Then suddenly he stepped forward and snatched something from one of the drawers.

Before the startled eyes of Mrs. Simons and the astonished gaze of President Jackson, he strode over to a window, studied the thing. "Simons' own man," he said. "This proves it. Now—" He broke off as the front door opened and closed.

As Clifford finished speaking, Simons, a tall spare man, appeared in the doorway, stopped and looked about in bewilderment.

"I'm Inspector Clifford of police headquarters," the officer said, stepping forward. "Simons, I arrest you for forging Edward Thurston's name for a check for $5,000."

Simons' eyes grew wide. The color drained from his cheeks. For a moment he stared as though struck, then impulsively turned and bolted.

Anticipating the move, Inspector Clifford leaped forward. His fingers caught hold of the tall man's collar, and yanked him backward.

"Quite simple when explained," Clifford was saying later. "Simons probably needed money. He was in the bank when Page was making his deposit, and picked up the blotter Page had used when signing his name. It was a new blotter, and the imprint therefore was definitely easy to copy for forgery purposes."

A Native is Just a Tourist Pausing for Breath

By Knight D. McKesson

Reprinted with Permission from the Lansing State Journal

About this time every year the male begins kneading the dirt with his toes like a stretching cat. He wants to get up north.

The average guy in these parts was born in the woods. He hated it.

He moved to the city where he could make a living and has spent every waking hour since scheming to get back to the boondocks. A tourist town in Michigan—and what town in Michigan isn't—is an odd aggregation of souls who hibernate all winter devising means of separating the tourist and his kale in the summer.

The garden variety of tourist is a biped who wears a camera, a large roll of bills and a superior attitude—none well.

A native is a man, woman or child of the immediate vicinity with a long-visored cap and sneakers who has lost at least three fingers stuffing illegal venison into meat grinders.

However, natives fall into three classifications and no treatise would be complete with such a casual treatment of the species.

There is the lad who was born in the neighborhood, went "down below" anything below—Town-line 16 is "below"—to make his pile and come back home to rest.

There is the poor cuss who hasn't been able to raise the dough to take a bus out of town yet.

And then there is the guy who has been in the area for three weeks or more. He also considers himself a native.

All natives have a mysterious look about them as though they knew where the best fishing is and what woods shelter the deer (They do too.)

They also have superior attitudes. And so the entire summer is spent with tourist and native being superior to each other.

Society among the natives is divided carefully between those who have rooms to let and those who don't.

The social line among resorters is between those who own their cottages and those peasants who rent.

We now have the sociological forces drawn up in full battle array. Remember you, as the tourist, are just one of the hundreds of thousands who chug into Michigan during the summer months like a cloud of locusts. And Michigan just loves you. While you strip the figurative tree bare, you leave a mountain of greenbacks behind you.

Don't feel lonesome. You're among friends, even if they won't admit it.

Now let us take up the case of the guide. The guide is a native who would rather fish than eat and usually does. He knows all the best fishing holes and for a mere 12 to 15 bucks a day he will direct you to a few or more mediocre spots—providing they require no portages. Saves the good fishing for himself. Think he's nuts?

The guide by tradition must be suntanned satirine character, just full of woodland lore. He's the strong silent type until his client mentions casually that maybe he could go for a drink.

Guide thereupon carries client to the nearest establishment which is really no great chore, since in the true tourist town if it doesn't contain alcohol it just won't sell. More taverns than telephones.

Now, dear friends, I do hope these words haven't soured Mr. Tourist on Michigan's super-fabulous north.

It's really not so rough. Plenty easy to get along. Best method is to spend the first three days getting all the pictures you want. Don't feel embarrassed. Natives always are tolerant toward cameras in a stoic sort of way.

On the fourth day, put aside your bright sport shirt. Wear a T-shirt, a pair of wash pants and low-cut sneakers. By this time you will have picked up the names of a few of the locals.

Stop at your favorite bistro—you'll have one of these by this time, too—call the bartender by name and inquire, "Where's they bitin' Ab?"

If he replies with a deadpan "By golly, sir, I don't know. Last week they were hittin' fine, sir. Ain't heard lately," you're still a tourist.

But if he leans over the bar and says in low voice, "Joe got his limit last night down to Squaw Bay," you're in, my friend.

Tilt your new long-billed cap back on your head and stalk down the street, looking neither left nor right as though you had a definite purpose.

If some sunburned dawdler peering into windows and inspecting store fronts burps into you give him an expressionless stare and mutter, "Dang tourist."

And you'll start having the time of your life.

Grayling Fire Department News

Weekly meeting of August 4th was called to order by Chief LaMotte at 7:30 p. m.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved. Following the reading of the minutes we had a discussion about all the business places we had gone through the last two meetings.

We also talked about the new aluminum ladder which the department is getting. It will be a three channel 50 foot ladder. This type of a ladder is supposed to be light and easy to handle.

The Department is still hoping that some more business men will donate more flashing lights. We have three lights donated by the Welsh Motor Sales.

The meeting was adjourned at 9:00 p. m.

Fifteen members were present. There were no fires during this past week.

pure wool

Styles for you, whatever you look for in suits. Steals for you, whatever the price you usually pay. Creamy pure wool flannels, unlined to be light, bulkless and comfortable under coats or indoors. Sacony gives them ribbon-taped seams, really deep facings, hidden layers of canvas that keep those nipped waists and curve-line hips in figure-balancing shapeliness. Colors? Brilliant and newsw, or quietly traditional.

Frying Pan Fodder

Learning early in life that there is more to a frog than a croaking tune from yonder marsh is Patricia Schafer, daughter of wildlife artist Charles Schafer. "Tasty" "hopper" has a flavor not unlike that of a spring chicken fryer in the opinion of some gourmets. Frog hunting season is now on and continues through November 15. Conservation department says they may be taken in any manner except by use of spear with light. Person hunting with fire arm should use hollow-point bullet to prevent frog from sinking and making it difficult to retrieve.
